Greenbelt Museum to Expand In Space, Hours and Offerings

by Erica Johns

The Greenbelt Museum will expand to colocate all visitor programs and museum operations by creating a new Education and Visitor Center at the museum, with work expected to begin within the next 18 months. Museum staff hope to open the facility by Greenbelt's 90th anniversary in 2027. Museum Director Megan Searing Young spoke about the museum's plan for renovations at a June 12 event hosted by the Greenbelt Rotary Club.

Why Renovate?

The Museum house occupies a 1937 block Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) home at 10-B Crescent Road, restored to its 1937 to 1952 appearance, whose 836-square-foot size limits how many people can visit at one time. Young said it's challenging not having enough space to help people learn about the house, the museum's most important teaching tool. Staff manage by holding programs outside and at the Community Center. Difficulties include 10-B's 1937 second-floor bathroom requiring that mobility-impaired visitors use Community Center or Library bathrooms and leaving visitors unsure whether to go to the Community Center or 10-B.

The redesign will create an education and visitor center next door at 10-A Crescent Road, which the city purchased in 2016.

IMAGE BY OLD LINE ARCHITECTS

The 10-A house will be renovated and its addition replaced. There will be a first-floor accessible entrance, orientation and exhibition room, hands-on learning lab and accessible restroom. The museum office, archives and storage will be upstairs. Exterior work will remove 10-A's siding and modify its rooflines to match its exterior to 10-B's 1937 block walls and roof. The 10-B historic house will not change except for a new HVAC system.

Consolidating all museum activity and moving staff from the Community Center will enable the Museum to open at least two to three days more per week. It is currently open Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m.

New Uses

The Museum encourages careful touching of its collections, including summer camp programs for children with dressing up in period clothing and doing laundry by hand. Young said they look forward to using the hands-on learning lab for more such experiences, including teaching cooking using World War II ration points and darning socks to show how residents lived during the Depression and wartime.

They plan to convert 10-A's porch trash closet to a 24-hour information kiosk that will light up when the door opens.

The facility will also be the

PGCPS Superintendent Pushed Out; Controversial Interim Appointed

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

On Thursday, June 12, Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) Board of Education met in closed session to discuss the future of Superintendent Millard House II, a meeting precipitated by a vote of no confidence by the Prince George's County Educators Association (PGCEA) (see page 6 of the June 12 issue). That closed-door meeting resulted in House stepping down after only two years in the role. The next morning, on Friday, June 13, incoming County Executive Aisha Braveboy announced the appointment of Shawn Joseph as Interim Superintendent.

Shawn Joseph was appointed Interim Superintendent of PGCPS.

Joseph was this district's Deputy Superintendent for Teaching and Learning from 2014 to 2016, before he became the Director of Schools (superintendent) for Metro Nashville Public Schools, a position from which he himself was ousted.

House's Departure

Following the closed meeting, PGCPS announced what it called a mutual agreement for House to leave effective June 18, 2025. House's contract was supposed to run through June 30, 2027. His severance package has so far not been disclosed. The News Review requested information about the severance from PGCPS's office for media inquiries, the office of the Board of Education, Chair of the Board of Education Brandon Jackson and Greenbelt School Board Representative Jonathan Briggs. Briggs was the only person to respond to our enquiries, saying that he was not free to talk about the agreement right now. On Monday, June 16, the News Review filed a Public Information Act request for that

Advisory Groups Talk Processes, Referral Tracking, Absences, More

by Matthew Arbach

At the June 9 Greenbelt City Council worksession, after an update from all of the city's advisory groups (see article on page 6), there was a discussion about the operating process of these groups and how the city could best aid them to enhance their efficiency in providing the valuable guidance each one offers both council and the city. Prior to this, former councilmember and resident Konrad Herling urged council to be aware of a prevailing sentiment among many of the city's African American residents. Many feel a limited access to many of the city's offerings, such as transportation, recreation, the arts and education. The high cost of housing was also cited, he said. Herling said he gathered this information as part of his efforts with the Reparations Commission.

Collaboration Needed

Several on council remarked that there should be more collaboration among advisory groups, as many have agendas that overlap and address a wide variety of issues. Many of the advisory groups felt a need for a clear and easily accessible record of the status of all of the referrals that these groups provide on a regular basis. Council was amenable to this, with many at the meeting hoping that the city's upcoming new website could have such a listing.

The consensus of the groups

Red Velvet Cake on Juneteenth

by Sandy Rodgers

On Juneteenth, African Americans and others across the United States gather to feast and celebrate as they have since June 19, 1865, the day that federal troops arrived in Galveston, Texas, and took control of the state to free the last enslaved people two and a half years after President Lincoln’s 1863 Emancipation Proclamation. The holiday was first observed in Texas, with festivities including parades, the reading of the Emancipation Proclamation and, especially, food. According to a June 19, 2018, article in Atlas Obscura, there were “charcoal-grilled meats, greens, black-eyed peas and teacakes, but also an assortment of foods and drinks with red hues.”

“Red velvet cake, red strawberry soda and red punch always made appearances,” said the article. “For a long time, relatives told young ones that the red symbolized the blood of the millions of enslaved people who had suffered and died. But the red foods and drinks may have had a longer history that began on the continent these people were taken from.”

“... The practice of eating red foods – red cake, barbecue, punch and fruit – may owe its existence to the enslaved Yoruba and Kongo brought to Texas in the 19th century,” explains the article, citing culinary historian and food writer Michael Twitty and his blog Afroculinaria.

“Red, in many West African cultures is a symbol of strength, spirituality and life and death. It’s possible this cultural legacy along with these groups’ distinct food knowledge of okra, beans, melon and many other food groupings – some red, some not – was brought across the Atlantic.” See the full article at atlasobscura.com/articles/what-is-juneteenth.

Unreliable Cell Service Can Be a Safety Issue

What happens if in an emergency, we’re unable to make a simple phone call to 911 or to a friend/neighbor? What happens if, in lieu of the above, we’re physically unable to leave our homes to seek help or to reach a window to open it to call for help or summon neighbors by crying out or banging on a wall? What happens in this situation where minutes if not seconds can make a difference between life and death?

A good 60 percent of the time, the bars on my phone are non-existent. Therefore, I can’t make or receive calls/texts to: conduct business, consult with and/or make or cancel appointments with my doctors or respond to calls demanding my immediate attention, often resulting in the callers thinking I’m ignoring them or being rude, etc. For the past

Materialists

The Life of Chuck

Charles “Chuck” Krantz experiences the wonder of love, the heartbreak of loss and the multitudes contained in all of us in a buoyant and often wonderful adaptation of one of Stephen King’s more cosmically optimistic tales. The film is a departure for horror film director Mike Flanagan (Absentia, Oculus and Doctor Sleep). Said critic Odie Henderson of the Boston Globe, “This film feels like the coziest of blankets enveloping you in the theater. However, you should expect a few jolts of static electricity as you snuggle into that blanket. After all, this touching, beautiful film is based on a novella by Stephen King.”

The Phoenician Scheme

From director Wes Anderson (Asteroid City, The Wonderful Story of Henry Sugar, The Royal Tenenbaums), the film tells the story of a family and a family business. Travis Hopson of Punch Drunk Critics calls the movie, “the most enjoyable and daring movie Anderson has ever done.”

Rustin

The architect of 1963’s momentous March on Washington, Bayard Rustin was one of the greatest activists and organizers the world has ever known. He challenged authority, never apologized for who he was, what he believed or who he desired. And he did not back down. He made history and, in turn, he was forgotten. Directed by DGA Award and five-time Tony Award winner George C. Wolfe and starring Emmy Award winner Colman Domingo, Rustin shines a long overdue spotlight on the extraordinary man who, alongside giants like the Reverend Martin Luther King Jr., Adam Clayton Powell Jr. and Ella Baker, dared to imagine a different world, and inspired a movement in a march toward freedom.

Carl Fredricksen (Ed Asner), a 78-year-old balloon salesman, is about to fulfill a lifelong dream. Tying thousands of balloons to his house, he flies away to the South American wilderness. But cur-mudgeonly Carl’s worst nightmare comes true when he discovers a little boy named Russell is a stowaway aboard the balloon-powered house.

Fireflies

Firefly season is beginning. Connect with nature and enjoy the magic of fireflies this summer. Visit the Greenbelt Firefly Sanctuary. Park at the old St. Hugh’s School then cross Crescent Road to the Stream Valley Park. Follow the lighted path to reach the sanctuary. The later at night, the better the show. Do not use lights of any kind in the Sanctuary, as it disturbs the fireflies.

Fireflies are beautiful throughout Greenbelt. They favor dark wooded areas throughout the city. To encourage fireflies in your backyard allow leaf litter and plant debris to accumulate in a damp undisturbed area. Keep backyard lights out from mid-June to mid-July.

Obituaries

Richard Marcus

The family of Richard (Rick) I. Marcus, Esq., mourns for the loss of their husband and brother, who died on March 28, 2025. He died after suffering from complications of Parkinson's disease. Rick was admitted to the District of Columbia Bar. While living in Greenbelt, he was in the practice of law with William (Bill) J. Howard for over 20 years in Riverdale. He and Bill represented some restaurants in Bethesda and had a general family law and juvenile practice. An avid reader of history and thrillers, Rick also became devoted to the practice of tai chi. For many years, he took weekly classes in Greenbelt with Larry

Richard Marcus in 1986

Fleming and later with Taj Johnson (Wu form). He was also a dog walker of his two Westies, Raffy and Sasha. Rick would give you the shirt off his back with no thought for personal fanfare. A genuinely nice guy. Rick was buried at National Memorial Cemetery in Falls Church, Va., on April 2, 2025. The ceremony was a traditional Jewish service. Rick is survived by his wife Pamela and sister Sherry. A Celebration of Life and Memorial will be held for Rick on June 23 at the Greenbelt American Legion from 1 to 3 p.m. To attend, RSVP to his wife Pamela at pgregory2@earthlink.net by June 21.

three months, I have had to leave my home to make a phone call elsewhere in Greenbelt or outside of Greenbelt! Unreliable cell service is, at best, inconvenient and at worst, dangerous. Note that many members of our community have given up their landlines and rely solely on their cellphones. And many are senior citizens. We now find ourselves in a cellular wasteland because someone has been asleep at the wheel. Susan L. Smithers

Who Should Be Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen 2025?

Summer is still getting started, but the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival is just 10 weeks away. Since 1973, our local annual Festival includes recognizing an Outstanding Citizen: someone in Greenbelt whose unpaid volunteer efforts have made Greenbelt a better place. Volunteerism is the essence of our community. The committee of volunteers who select the Outstanding Citizen doesn't know everyone in town. Finding that special person in a city full of volunteers requires a full spectrum of community input. Tell us about someone you know who contributes to our Greenbelt community. Every successful nonprofit relies on a team of volunteers. Without volunteers, our many cooperatives could not function. Without dedicated citizens giving their time, the City of Greenbelt could not rely on vital input from advisory boards and committees. Volunteers run youth programs and make sports and scouting programs possible. Volunteers shuttle senior citizens to medical appointments. Nominate someone you know by completing the form on page 9. Describe their contributions to our community, their acts of kindness and their actions that make Greenbelt better – whether the whole city or a neighborhood or organization. Nominations are due Monday, July 28. This year's honoree will be the 51st since the award began in 1973. The honoree will also serve as Grand Marshal of our Greenbelt Labor Day Parade.

Condolences to the family, friends and fellow tai chi devotees on the death of Rick Marcus. Congratulations to Eleanor Roosevelt High School alumna Melissa Emessiene on her appointment to the United States Naval Academy. Congratulations to the Greenbelt Municipal Swim Team on their win at the first meet of the season. Belated best wishes to Jeanette Grotke, who turned 90 in late April. She celebrated the day with members of 5 Court Eastway.

Every Greenbelt resident knows someone providing outstanding volunteer service, often without the recognition they deserve. History indicates many Outstanding Citizens were nominated several times before their selection. The committee counts on nominations from the public to identify this person each year and to ensure Greenbelt's civic traditions grow and flourish into the future. MDA Advises Mechanical Control of Spotted Lanternfly

Spotted lanternfly nymphs have been emerging around Greenbelt, sometimes in alarming numbers. The Maryland Department of Agriculture (MDA) recommends using mechanical treatment to control them, as there is no chemical that targets this invasive species exclusively. The use of chemical treatments can cause unintended harm to nontarget species such as beneficial pollinators. Unfortunately, eradication is not possible once the population is established, so lowering the number of spotted lanternflies through mechanical means is encouraged while protecting native insects and plants. Physically removing, crushing or trapping spotted lanternfly can slow the growth of the population and lessen their impact on the area they’re feeding on.

MDA uses a variety of mechanical methods to treat for spotted lanternfly, including backpack vacuums, handheld nets or by hand with collection cups. With these efforts, thousands of spotted lanternflies have been collected, with follow-up surveys showing a decreased population over time. These methods can be easily replicated at home using a hand vacuum, a simple butterfly net or by hand. Spotted lanternflies can be captured by approaching slowly from the front, as they are less likely to jump away. Circle traps, a type of trap designed to catch spotted lanternfly nymphs, can be used to passively capture the insect, and can be purchased online or made from simple materials. Penn State Extension has a video tutorial on how to build a circle trap at <https://tinyurl.com/yuphmjms>. In the wintertime, adult spotted lanternflies die off, leaving only their egg masses behind to hatch in the spring. This is the best time to reduce the population, as they are stationary eggs that can be easily crushed and scraped away. Each egg mass houses 30 to 50 eggs, so scraping as many as possible can significantly decrease the next generation of spotted lanternfly before they have the chance to hatch and spread out. Egg masses look like light grayish splotches of mud, cement or lichen and are typically ¾ inch wide. Egg masses can be found on tree trunks and the underside of tree branches from September to June. Advisory Groups Update Council

by Matthew Arbach

The Greenbelt City Council worksession on June 9 was a comprehensive update with all of the city’s advisory boards and committees. They shared their efforts over the past year and any upcoming projects, along with their current memberships. Council relies strongly on the guidance these groups provide.

ACE
The Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) was represented by Chair Janet Mirsky. The group has five members, out of a possible nine. In their yearly meetings with the city’s school principals and PTA presidents, there emerged an aim to provide more opportunities for student government leaders. The committee had a successful meeting with these students and plans to make this a yearly effort. ACE has presented two grants to schools this year and is looking to develop a school supply replenishment program, similar to one in College Park. It was decided to allow principals to submit grant applications in both August and October. ACE is looking for more funding in order to continue its scholarships to high school seniors.

PRAB
The Park and Recreation Advisory Board (PRAB) Chair Matthew Sickle said it has six members now, with three vacancies. The main focus of PRAB last year was its recommendations concerning the Buddy Attick Park (BAP) Master Plan, with Sickle expressing hope that council will begin its implementation. The board looks forward to providing similar guidance on the Indian Creek Park Master Plan, as well as the Armory site.

APB
The Advisory Planning Board (APB) is at seven members, with two vacancies. Chair Benjamin Friedman stated that APB weighed in on the city’s Strategic Wayfinding Plan and BAP Master Plan. The board was also involved in a traffic-calming study at Ridge Road, Lakeside Drive and Greenhill Road. In 2026, APB hopes to aid the Greenbelt Police Department (GPD) in the Vision Zero traffic-fatality initiative and to work with and support the efforts of the city’s Economic Development staff.

PSAC
The Public Safety Advisory Committee (PSAC) Representative Laura Kressler said that the group convened three community meetings on radon, carbon monoxide and severe weather events. PSAC also advised GPD on its draft general order on License Plate Readers and video surveillance. The committee is planning community meetings in the fall of 2025 on recognizing and protection against frauds and scams. PSAC has seven members and two vacancies.

Green ACES
John Lippert, chair of Green ACES, reported that it has 10 members, with one vacancy. He explained that Green ACES is a council advisory body, while the Green Team has a more active charge, implementing sustainability initiatives in the city; he noted that members and efforts between the two groups often overlap. Green ACES has been providing outreach on EVs and EV charging stations. It has recently promoted the Save-As-You-Throw solid waste disposal approach for the city and is exploring ways to continue the curbside food scraps pickup program, whose USDA grant funding expires in August.

AAB
The Arts Advisory Board (AAB), chaired by Tom Leamond, has seven core members and two vacancies. The board has been active in developing the public art projects at the Motiva Apartment complex and Braden Field, as well as possibly at the Greenbelt Co-op and Greenbelt Cinema. This year AAB plans an Arts Open House at the Community Center.

BOA
Board of Appeals (BOA) Chair Steve Skolnik said that his three-member group has had no referrals this year, citing that this was due to exceptional efforts of its staff liaison Terri Hruby.

City Council Allocates $30,000 To Emergency Assistance Fund

by Will Hammann

On Monday, June 2 the Greenbelt City Council approved a motion allocating $30,000 of remaining funds from the Fiscal Year 2025 budget toward the city’s Emergency Assistance Fund.

Councilmember Danielle McKinney put the motion forward and said that although leftover funds could be carried over for the following fiscal year, “there is a need right now for residents who are very much in need of rental assistance.” The program is meant to assist Greenbelt residents facing eviction or overdue utility bills due to a situational crisis, offering households the chance to apply for a one-time payment with a limit of $2,500.

In previous years, more than $1,000,000 of funds from the American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) had been used to offer rental assistance to residents. With few funds remaining, the program has since been supported by Greenbelt residents and businesses who gave $29,396 this fiscal year. Of those funds, $29,240 were dispersed to 21 households mostly for rental assistance at an average of $1,750, with a few smaller disbursements for food or utilities. “Essentially, every dollar that’s coming in is going out, and that’s on purpose,” said City Manager Josué Salmerón.

The Greenbelt Interfaith Leadership Association (GILA), which oversees the program in cooperation with the city and Greenbelt CARES, recently partnered with the Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket and Pharmacy for a round-up donation program where shoppers are asked if they’d like to round their purchase totals to the next dollar and donate the difference to the emergency fund.

The Co-op agreed to commit to the partnership for two months, after which it plans to offer the round-up program in partnership with other organizations, in rotation.

Mayor Emmett Jordan initially proposed a motion to limit the city’s contribution to a $10,000 challenge grant, but other councilmembers insisted that the full $30,000 be allocated for the program. “I believe that this is a very prudent use of funds for community members that need it immediately,” Councilmember Amy Knesel said.

Will Hammann is a student at the Philip Merrill College of Journalism interning with the Greenbelt News Review.

was that each one would greatly benefit from an internal and frequently updated list of the contact information of each group’s members. All agreed that this should only be shared by the group, with a general city email address being available for the public. When asked by council how chairs are appointed, the common response was that the job usually falls upon the person most willing to take it on. Most reported that there wasn’t a precise instruction on the process.

Inactive Members
Attendance was a serious issue for the groups. Nearly all stated that, at some point, there were members who appeared at meetings infrequently, or not at all, with no explanation. This makes achieving a quorum difficult, affecting each group’s ability to provide reports. The representatives reported a sense of frustration when they would receive a reappointment letter for such a recalcitrant member, leading to the chairs all wishing to be part of the reappointment process. There was an acknowledgement that health issues are a valid reason for absences and that each member must be judged individually on how they participate, as each one has a unique circumstance or skill set. There was also a general feeling among all present that there should be a policy concerning the mandatory level of attendance and participation. Council advised the groups to be more forthcoming on reporting chronic absences to them and their staff liaisons as a solution for this problem, making the removing of delinquent members more immediate. Some groups had bylaws in place for this instance, but this was not universal.

Duties and Procedures

mittee, said that it would be very helpful to each new chair for there to be a clear document, laying out the duties for the position and the correct procedure for submitting feedback to council. Ben Friedman, chair of the Advisory Planning Board (APB), expressed the need for council to make appointments that provided the most valuable skills each group needs. Mayor Emmett Jordan responded that council makes choices from a variety of criteria, such as interest, abilities, geographic location and diversity. APB member J Davis added that in recent years the number of applicants has greatly decreased, which makes being more selective less of an option.

Jordan made a general request to all the chairs to share with council a summation of their operating processes. He felt there was a need to develop a general system that all groups could follow, along with an ability for each group to function in a way that works best for it.

House’s Tenure

House’s brief tenure with PGCPS most notably saw an overhaul in transportation, including changes to school bell times and bussing, in an attempt to address chronic problems with buses and a driver shortage. He also led school safety measures such as clear backpacks and weapon detectors at high schools. On June 13, in the email announcing his departure, PGCPS also praised the board and House for “collaboratively” improving the school system, including increasing graduation rates to over 80 percent. That graduation rate improvement followed a grading policy reform that allows greater flexibility and opportunities for reassessment.

Under House, problems with communication and transparency continued, including, for example, a botched announcement of school bell changes and, locally, failure to inform the Dora Kennedy French Immersion school community of plans to move the school. The plans were announced by the News Review (see the February 1, 2024, issue). Also a subsequent hot mic comment that captured candid thoughts was at odds with a public presentation (see the February 14, 2024, issue).

Joseph’s History

Newly appointed Interim Superintendent Shawn Joseph left his former position of director (equivalent to superintendent) of Metro Nashville Public Schools in 2019 when that board of education voted 5 to 3 to terminate his contract. The Tennessee State Board of Nashville also recommended suspending his teaching license following allegations he failed to report multiple serious misconduct cases, including sexual harassment complaints (as reported across numerous Tennessee news outlets). The recommended suspension was fought by Joseph and never finalized. On Monday, June 16, Joseph wrote to the PGCPS community as their new interim superintendent to address “the elephant in the room.” “The reasons for my mutually agreed upon separation in Nashville were complex,” he wrote. “Issues of class, race, expectations and change were all at play.” Joseph’s departure from that role came with a contract payout of $261,250, $10,000 to cover legal costs of defending his state teaching license and other benefits. He has since served as faculty in the School of Education at Howard University and has an education and equity consulting firm.

According to News5Channel Nashville and others, accusations against Joseph in Nashville included nepotism in hiring and pay, pay discrepancies and illegal or problematic contracts, including a no-bid contract with a company with whom he’d previously worked in Maryland, and a “piggy-backed” contract that violated procurement rules. A district audit found nine violations of procurement policies and board members said he had misled them, news outlets in Tennessee reported. In addition, he allegedly failed to report educator misconduct in multiple cases, several of which led to lawsuits, including a lawsuit for unlawful retaliation by a member of human resources who said they tried to report a sexual harassment case, according to local news. The State Board recommended suspension of his license due to failure to report at least 12 educator misconduct cases, including extreme violations involving students, according to multiple news outlets. A NewsChannel 5 Nashville report outlined, in detail, sexual harassment cases that were not reported, what they called “questionable contracts,” a teacher “morale crisis,” pay disparities, including for his “friends or friends of his top staff,” “misleading statements to school board,” a “discipline crisis,” “election meddling” and “lack of transparency.” While some board members called for an independent investigation, others cautioned against unfair treatment of Joseph. He was the first African American to hold the position of CEO of the Metro Nashville School District. He denied wrongdoing.

During his tenure in Nashville, Joseph was credited with focusing on issues of equity, including initiatives to close achievement gaps and encourage culturally responsive teaching, and he oversaw increases in teacher pay.

Prior to the director position in Nashville, Joseph was deputy superintendent for teaching and learning for PGCPS for two years and before that, superintendent for the Seaford School District in Delaware for two years, from which he resigned mid-term due to “personal family reasons.”

Asked about his thoughts on Joseph leaving both of his previous superintendent positions early, and past allegations of procurement violations and failure to report misconduct, District 2 School Board Representative Briggs said that though “past experience can provide some insight about what to expect ... people do change, adapt and grow.” Though Joseph is serving only in an interim capacity during a national superintendent search, Briggs said, “I believe the opportunity we have allows us to try on for size a prospective superintendent candidate, while searching for others.” PGCPS Superintendent prior to House (then called CEO), Monica Goldson, began her appointment as an interim.

Briggs told the News Review that Joseph’s record in Nashville was “certainly concerning.” “Some of the most effective leaders in history are those who have failed miserably,” Briggs said, “therefore, I believe this provides an opportunity to understand better how Joseph will rise to the occasion and possibly meet this moment. I wouldn’t want to write him off because of his past, but I also agree that his past is an important factor for the board to gain more clarity about ... [W]hat I think is most important is the lessons he’s learned from it and how that will shape his actions as an interim.”

Sharon Taylor, director of communications for the county executive-elect, who selected Joseph, told the News Review that Braveboy believes Joseph is the right person at the right time. She also assured us that Joseph had been fully vetted and Braveboy and County Council Chair Edward Burroughs, along with stakeholders, all stood together in the recent press conference with confidence in Joseph. Asked about the violations of procurement policies and failures to report educator misconduct, Taylor said she couldn’t comment on what happened in Nashville.

When Joseph left PGCPS for Nashville he was publicly praised by then-PGCPS School Board Member Edward Burroughs III. Burroughs was elected to Prince George’s County Council in 2022 and was elected chair in March.

city’s visitor and welcome center, with information about citywide businesses and activities. Visitors can learn about Greenbelt history before exploring the city or taking a walking tour.

Museum docent Judy Parker has given tours to visitors she later encounters living in Greenbelt. She said people from out of town often visit the Museum to see what Greenbelt feels like. “It’s a big seller. So many of these families are looking for a different type of community. When they learn that I live here, they ask about my experience and want to know all about it,” Young said. “We can talk about all the things Greenbelt has to offer.”

What’s Finished, What’s Next
Museum staff incorporated community input, developed plans with a designer and architect and obtained GHI approval for the work.

Grants, state bonds and donations have raised $355,000 of the estimated $550,000 cost.

Still to come is completing fundraising, selecting a project manager and general contractor, obtaining permits, removing the existing addition and building a new addition.

Looking Back, Looking Forward

Young described the redesign as important because early Greenbelt provides so many lessons about issues still relevant today, including affordable housing, green space and quality of life. “Greenbelt really is so indicative of so many major issues of the 20th century: the Great Depression, World War II, cooperatives, suburbs, urban planning and race relations,” said Young. “We’re looking forward to having a centralized space where we can explore those topics.”

Community Support
An audience member asked how the Greenbelt community can support its museum. Young recommended talking about the project, visiting the museum, subscribing to its newsletter and, if one’s budget allows, making a tax-deductible donation to the 501(c)(3) nonprofit Friends of the Greenbelt Museum for the project. Young said, “We hope you’ll be inspired to work alongside us to make it happen.” Learn more about the expansion and donate at greenbeltmuseum.org/donate, entering “10-A” in the Comments section.

Greenbelt Rotary Club Service to Residents

At the end of the Museum talk, Greenbelt Rotary Club President Jennifer Dudley described the club’s programs that serve diverse needs across Greenbelt. They include:

- Sponsoring the Greenbelt Pumpkin Festival and Greenbelt Outstanding Citizen Award
- Thanksgiving food collections and other services for families and unhoused children at Springhill Lake Elementary School (SHLES) and Greenbelt Elementary School
- Funding school store items used in SHLES’s Positive Behavior Incentives Program
- Assisting the Greenbelt Grows and the Great Food Transition programs to share food and build community
- A Driver Education Program to fund learner’s permit driving for residents without access to a car and a licensed driver for their practice hours, and without the funds to pay for driving school instruction.

Dudley said the club welcomes new members interested in helping deliver these programs, or who have ideas of their own. The Club meets the first, third, fourth and fifth Thursday of each month at the Greenway Center IHOP at 8 a.m. First-time attendees receive a free breakfast.

BOE
The Board of Elections (BOE) is at five members with one vacancy. Member Nicole Shyong said that the group is highly focused on the imminent city election, ensuring that all aspects run smoothly, and increasing voter participation. BOE is set for a council worksession addressing voting issues such as the use of districts, council terms and ranked choice voting.

CRAB
Community Relations Advisory Board (CRAB) Chair Chalya Lar spoke about the group’s efforts for city welcome signs at the city’s three entrances – Center, East and West – or at the city’s two major parks, in three to four languages. CRAB has convened meetings to provide immigration-related advice to city residents. A major goal is to create a better sense of unity among the city’s three sections. CRAB has seven members.

ERB
Bob Rudd, chair of the Employee Relations Board (ERB), said that “no news is good news” with this group. He explained the court-like process of ERB, which conducts hearings concerning employee appeals and grievances and includes lawyers and sworn testimony, citing the group’s confidentiality and private hearings, if requested, with its goal of unanimous decisions. The board has five members.

EC
The Ethics Commission (EC), chaired by Isiah Horton, meets in an election year and is charged with reviewing financial and candidate disclosure forms for all elected and appointed officials. Horton hopes that the work of this year’s session can be condensed into a single meeting.

FPAB
Thomas Doggett, co-chair of the Forest Preserve Advisory Board (FPAB), now at seven members and two vacancies, stated that the FPAB has completed the trail maintenance and reroute of the Canyon Creek Trail. The group continues to manage invasive species, like bush honeysuckle. The board is working with GHI on the effects of the recent woodland fire at Beltsville Agricultural Research Center.

SCAC
The Senior Citizens Advisory Committee (SCAC), represented by chair Carol Shaw, has identified a number of priorities for the city’s seniors through their fall open forum and outreach efforts. Senior and affordable housing was cited. Safety was a prime concern, specifically on the steps between the Community Center and the Library parking lot, the intersection of Hanover Parkway and Greenbelt Road and the intersection of Lakecrest Drive and Legion Drive.

Reparations Commission
Bob Rand, a member of the Reparations Commission (RC), explained that this group continues its charge of researching the best way forward toward possible reparations for the city’s African American and Native American residents. Key to the process was the use of public meetings, interviews, surveys and convening with other reparation and educational entities, like University of Maryland and Howard University, throughout the state and country, with the commission focusing on acquiring more guidance concerning Native Americans. The RC has 19 members.

ACT
The Advisory Committee on Trees (ACT), represented by chair Charles Jackman, helped facilitate the Arbor Day celebration on April 12 with tree planting, alongside the Public Works Department. Preserving the city’s tree canopy, at 62 percent, is a major focus.

Discussion between committee members and councilmembers after the committee reports will be covered in a separate article.

Periodical cicada Magicicada septendecim emerges from its nymphal skin at Lakeside North, May 26, maybe four years too late. Like many other 17-year cicadas in Greenbelt these days, it is probably a "straggler" that missed the 2021 emergence. That means it was underground 21 years.

Greenbelt Soccer Alliance Wraps up Final Games

The Greenbelt Soccer Alliance wrapped up its final games on the first weekend of June at Driskell Community Park in Hyattsville. It was a great season with lots of skills learned and improved on, gamesmanship imparted and fun had by all. The last games were played in between bouts of rain, showing the true commitment of the teams and their coaches. The league is entirely volunteer run and it’s a monumental undertaking. Special thanks to all the coaches and to Jonas Cadwallader, the commissioner, for a great season.

Babe Ruth Juniors Drop Close One

by Ian Gleason

The Greenbelt Babe Ruth Seniors (18U) shake hands after their game vs. the Laurel Bolts at Laurel High School on June 6.

Last Thursday, June 12 the Greenbelt Babe Ruth Juniors (15U) had their first home game of the season at Braden Field against Grandslam, a team composed mostly of players from the Beltsville area. In the top of the first inning the leadoff batter for Grandslam reached on an error and proceeded to score. Greenbelt starting pitcher Elijah Miller worked out of trouble and Greenbelt responded with two runs in the bottom of the first inning. Miller had a strong pitching performance as both teams struggled offensively. The score would remain 2-1 until the fifth inning when Grandslam tied the game 2-2. Greenbelt had a chance to go ahead late when Troy White hit a double into the left center gap, but Greenbelt failed to get him home. In the top of the seventh inning Grandslam scored three runs to push the score to 5-2. Greenbelt couldn’t muster any runs in the final half-inning and dropped their home opener. The Seniors (18U) played the nightcap after the first game, losing 9-3 to the DC Knights. Both teams return to Braden Field this Thursday, June 19 with games at 6 and 8:15 p.m. Next week there are games at Braden Field on Tuesday, June 24 at 8:15 p.m., Wednesday, June 25 at 6:30 p.m. and Thursday, June 26 at 6 p.m.

Greenbelt Protesters Say: No Kings!

by Lesley Kash

On Saturday, June 14 an unexpectedly large (but predictably peaceful and cheery) crowd, estimated at 500 to 700, filled the Municipal Building lawn, and then the Spellman Overpass, to capacity. The gathering was one of around 2,000 No Kings events nationwide that drew millions of protesters into the streets across the country.

Before the 3 p.m. start time, the Municipal Building was enveloped in a chanting, sign-waving crowd. The march stepped off around 3:15, heading up Southway, accompanied by the Honk! Situation band and shepherded by cheerful, alert Greenbelt Police. As the crowd flowed left onto Ridge, motorists waiting at the intersection enthusiastically honked horns and shouted support. Along the route, neighbors waved their own protest signs and enjoyed the spectacle from lawn chairs in their front yards.

The Spellman Overpass was decorated with American flags and protest banners big enough to read from the Baltimore-Washington Parkway below. And it was packed, with just enough room in the middle for safe ingress and egress and friendly crowd management by Greenbelt Police. Parkway traffic below slowed in both directions for two hours, with hundreds of drivers waving and honking their horns.

Many visitors from out of town, having been directed to Greenbelt by the No Kings organizers, took the opportunity to get acquainted with the town. One family asked for directions to the Cinema and restaurants and a fellow marcher responded, “Welcome to Greenbelt!”

Solidarity in support of democratic processes and due process is a major theme of the day.

Greenbelters Julia Raymond and her son Arthur Gerdes, 5, make their way to the bridge.

Caroline Timbers and her sons Kaio and Luca Timbers-Bomfim, aged 9 and 11, came from Washington, D.C., to attend the Greenbelt event.
